A Test Knowledge Base for FinSight AI RAG

This synthetic document is created specifically for testing a Retrieval-Augmented Generation (RAG) system. It contains simple financial-planning information so that retrieval results can be easily verified.

1. Budgeting

A monthly budget helps a person understand where money is going and plan how much can be saved. A useful starting point is to divide expenses into essential expenses, non-essential expenses, and savings. The budget should be reviewed at the end of each month and adjusted when spending patterns change.

2. Emergency Fund

An emergency fund is money kept aside for unexpected expenses such as urgent repairs, temporary loss of income, or other financial emergencies. For this test guide, a reasonable target is three to six months of essential expenses. The emergency fund should be kept in an accessible and relatively low-risk place.

3. Saving Money

Saving becomes easier when it is treated as a planned expense. A person can set a monthly savings target and move that amount to savings soon after receiving income. Reducing repeated discretionary purchases, subscriptions that are rarely used, and unplanned food or shopping expenses can improve monthly savings.

4. Expense Categories

Category	Examples
Food	Restaurants, groceries, food delivery
Transport	Bus, train, taxi, fuel
Shopping	Clothes, electronics, online purchases
Bills	Electricity, internet, mobile bills
Entertainment	Movies, games, subscriptions
Education	Books, courses, study materials

5. Spending Analysis

Expense analysis can reveal which categories consume the largest share of monthly spending. For example, if food spending repeatedly exceeds its planned budget, the user can review restaurant, delivery, and grocery transactions separately. Tracking expenses over several months is more useful than looking at a single transaction.

6. Example Monthly Budget

Category	Monthly Budget
Food	■5,000
Transport	■3,000
Bills	■4,000
Shopping	■2,000
Entertainment	■1,500
Savings	■8,000

7. Financial Goals

Financial goals should be specific and measurable. Examples include building an emergency fund, saving for education, reducing unnecessary spending, or planning for a large purchase. A goal can be divided into monthly targets so progress can be measured regularly.

8. RAG Test Facts

The emergency fund target mentioned in this document is three to six months of essential expenses. The example monthly food budget is ■5,000. The example monthly transport budget is ■3,000. The example monthly savings target is ■8,000. These values are synthetic test data and are not personalized financial advice.
